The Center for African Peace & Conflict Resolution (CAPCR) was established in 1996 at California State University, Sacramento. CAPCR has been housed in the College of Health of Human Services to provide conflict resolution and reconciliation services for agencies, governments, institutions, businesses, civil society and community organizations, and other groups through training, education, research, and intervention. CAPCR develops curriculum/materials and provides training and services on mediation, negotiation, arbitration, restorative justice, and other conflict resolution activities. The target audience is governmental and nongovernmental organizations, business and community groups, public and private agencies, educational institutions, and allied professional associations (in Sacramento & Africa). The CAPCR mission aligns with the University's established mission of global education and community service, as well as the campus' current priorities of promoting diversity and inclusion, fostering community engagement as an anchor university, supporting student success, and developing philanthropy. The annual international conference and peace awards are a signature campus global program with participants from more than 100 countries and five continents since the initial convening in 1992 under the then African Studies Coalition that led to the conceptualization and creation of CAPCR in 1996.

This conference theme aims to examine the various objectives, strategies, status and outcomes of the reparation movements, open new areas of discussion or debates for thoughts and action as well as recommendations for coalitions and collaborations for peacemaking and unity.

The conference presentations and exchanges will create opportunities for local, national, international, & regional networking in various forms of peacemaking practices and research. Thus, identifying and addressing current voids or gaps in harm reduction will provide opportunities for self-assessment, reflection, and innovation among advocates, practitioners, scholars, donors, and policymakers. The culmination of the conference is the Peace Awards Dinner which will be held on the evening of April

Preliminary program as of February 20, 2025

26, 2025, in support of the creation of an endowment for the Africa Peace Fellows—to build the next generation of peace leaders.

In 2018, the CAPCR Africa Peace Fellows (APF) Endowment was established with funding from Fatai Yusufu of FAYUS INC., with the goal of raising USD$25M. The APF is an advanced-level certificate conflict resolution training program for senior-midlevel leaders in critical sectors of building and maintaining peace and development in Africa. The main objective is to develop or increase critical human skills for preventing, managing, and resolving high-level, intractable conflicts and ensure continuous use or application of acquired knowledge and skills. Although the 2020 COVID-19 pandemic has delayed our fundraising plans, the need for the APF remains intact as the source of future, long-term programming of the CAPCR. Tentatively, the first cohort or pilot is expected to start in 2026 for 15 months, with recruitment commencing in April 2025.

Every dollar of support will benefit the program by offsetting the cost of travel, support, and training staff, technology, and other related participants costs.

By considering becoming a donor of the APF, your contribution will bring us one step closer to our goal of a stable endowment of $25 million for Africa's peace and prosperity. Your donation will be acknowledged, including naming opportunities.

Restorative Justice (RJ) Facilitator Training & Facilitation Services

The Center for African Peace and Conflict Resolution (CAPCR) at California State University, Sacramento (CSUS) is implementing a restorative justice facilitator training under a grant from the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR), and seeks to recruit qualified individuals to serve as facilitators of victim-offender dialogues (VODs) at several California prisons as well as restorative justice dialogues/circles at California State Prison-Sacramento (CSP-Sacramento). You are invited to apply if interested and meet the criteria below.

Restorative justice (RJ) seeks to address all forms of harm, and its various processes provide an opportunity for acknowledgment, accountability, and harm reduction. RJ is victim-centered, including the VOD process, and has gained increased attention in contemporary criminal justice reform policies, especially as a means of achieving closure for crime survivors and aiding in offender accountability as well as rehabilitation, and perhaps transform relationships.

We will select and train approximately 20 participants that are interested in and committed to restorative justice processes. The 40-hour training will include virtual and face-to-face (on the CSUS campus) components and will be led by a diverse team of restorative justice scholars and practitioners. The training will cover topics related to trauma, empathy, accountability, apology, restitution, and forgiveness. Following the training, successful trainees are expected to co-facilitate RJ dialogues/circles at California State Prison-Sacramento and VOD cases as referred by the Office of Victim & Survivor Rights & Services of the CDCR.

Requirements for Participation

In addition to the requirements below, interested individuals should also be willing and committed to seeing humanity in all people, holding space, and suspending judgment, doing no further harm, and cultivating relationships based on mutual respect, trust, and confidentiality.
