Healing Movements:

Chicanx-Indigenous Activism and Criminal Justice in California

Healing Movements lifts up a Chicanx-Indigenous project of 'cultural healing' as a powerful means of refusing and dismantling colonial and carceral institutions and logics. Through deeply engaged ethnography with formerly gang-involved women and men in Salinas, CA, we see the creativity of everyday abolitionist work to build a social movement through cultura, ceremony, and love, amid police brutality and attempted prison expansion.
